

Phone number +30 2810 394777

Email tzatzarakis@uoc.gr

Heraklion 10-4-2025

Emmanouil Tzatzarakis is Associate Professor of Toxicology at the Medical School of the University of Crete and Head of the Toxicology Unit of the Laboratory of Forensic Sciences. Graduated in Chemistry (1995) with a PhD thesis at the Medical School of the University of Crete (2000). He has been elected a member of the Board of Directors of the Hellenic Society of Toxicology, while he is the Secretary of the Hellenic Society of Forensic Toxicologists (HAFT).

Education

1991 – 1995	B.A. in Chemistry, Department of Chemistry, University of Crete, Heraklion
1996 – 2000	PhD Thesis, Toxicology Laboratory, Medical School, University of Crete, Heraklion.
March 2000	Postgraduate Training, Toxicology Laboratory, Louis Pasteur University, Strasbourg, France.

Member of

Association of Greek Chemist

Hellenic Society of Toxicology

Society of Hair Testing (SOHT)

International Association of Forensic Toxicologists (TIAFT)

Hellenic Association of Forensic Toxicologists (HAFT)

Research interests

The research interests of Emmanouil Tzatzarakis focus on the development of analytical methods with application in toxicological investigation, development of analytical methodologies for biomonitoring, assessment of the burden of specific population groups to toxicants, correlation of exposure to xenobiotics with health problems as well as risk assessment exposure studies.

He has participated in national and international research programs as a researcher and/or coordinator while his research work is presented in national and international conferences, in two patents, in 12 book chapters and in more than 180 scientific articles in international journals with total citations exceeding 6000 (google scholar).

Publications

<https://scholar.google.gr/citations?user=kY0qHrYAAAAJ&hl=el>